Notes for Moses Miller:

I found only one person who knew anything about who was born outside the United States. Christina Shoemaker Miller was born in Germany in 1780. She was a saintly Methodist lady who prayed so very earnestly that her husband, Moses Miller (born 1778) would not build a still.

When I asked Grandma Bright about her family, she said write to Sue Stout in Illinois. She was Grandmas cousin. A remarkable woman, (she is) a minister in the Seventh Day Adventist Church. She learned to type after she was seventy years old. I had several very interesting letter from her, and she sent me the story about the still. Here it is as it was published in Sue Stouts Sunday school paper.

Moses Miller and the Still

It was either very late in the eighteenth century or early in the nineteenth that my grandfather, Moses Miller, together with his family and three orphan children, emigrated from Virginia to Ohio, and settled on a tract of land about nine miles from what is now the city of Dayton, Ohio. His selection of land contained some very fine springs of water. My people were Methodists of hard Dutch ancestry. Grandfather was a millwright, and soon built a grist mill to which was later added a saw mill.

In those days liquor was found in almost every pioneer home, and Grandfather, seeing the ample water supply, conceived the idea of adding to his material wealth by building a house for a still. My more devout grandmother saw great danger in his proposition, and she used all her arts of persuasion to turn him from his purpose, but without avail. The men were put to work sawing lumber, and Grandmother, seeing that her arguments were useless, transferred her plea to the throne of the everlasting God. Though her labors were very exacting, she spent the fourth of every day in earnest prayer.

She saw the work at the mill progressing day by day until the workmen were called to begin the erection of the still. That night Grandfather retired to rest as usual, but in a dream he beheld a large scroll containing the names of many candidates for eternal life. With great satisfaction he saw his own name among the rest, but just as he was about to express his joy, a tall angel standing by brushed his name from the list.

Grandfather awoke with a feeling of horror coupled with the impression that if he persisted in his purpose he would be forever lost. All the rest of the night he paced the floor, fighting the battle, which owing to my Grandmothers intercession, led him to victory.

He had ample opportunity to sell the lumber, but he refused, saying that he must keep it as a reminder of his great temptation.

This story is now written out in the hope that those who read it may be led to lay hold upon the promises of the same prayer-hearing God, who so graciously answered the prayers of my grandmother more than one hundred years ago.

Sue Stout

Notes for Christena Shoemaker:

This is the only information we have of this family. It was told to Blanche Lytle Wilson and Constance Bright Rodaway by their grandmother, Rachel Elizabeth McDermed Bright.

The Shoemakers owned a large plantation in Virginia. After the husband died, his wife (though a cripple) managed the plantation, and an elderly colored man (a slave) would push her wheel chair so she could oversee the crops and work being done.

After a few years, she freed all of her slaves, but this one elderly slave refused to leave her. She sold the plantation and went to Ohio to live with her daughter, Christina (wife of Moses Miller, born about 1778). This same servant still pushed her chair when she chose to be outside and remained with the Miller family until he died. Mrs. Shoemaker (first name not known) lived to be one-hundred and six years of age. Possibly buried at the Bethel cemetery where Moses Miller and some of his children are buried.

Christina Shoemaker (Shumacher) was born about 1780, in Germany, and lived to be eighty-two years old. She is buried near Mackinaw, Illinois. She was living with her daughter, Catherine Margaret Rhorer, at that time.

These facts have not been proven yet. I do have the will of Moses Miller and his father's will (Isaac Miller). Only true fact: In the will of Moses Miller, he names his wife, Christina. (no maiden name given).
